Rebranding may include a "Branded" copyright notice with the said client's name and/or logo and contact information present. This is for branding purposes only and in no way relinquishes VanTek Consulting, LLC's ownership rights provided under the law, all VanTek Consulting, LLC. Copyrights and ownership remain intact and enforceable.

Any content, regardless of form (either digital or hard copy) that is authorized for duplication and redistribution by clients, must be destroyed and/or purged from storage upon request when authorization has been revoked.

VanTek Consulting, LLC. Reserves the right to revoke duplication and/or delivery authorization at any time.

Copyright infringement is the act of exercising any rights granted to the copyright owner without permission or legal authority (Title 17, United States Code, Section 106 of the Copyright Act). Copyright owners have exclusive rights of reproduction, adaptation, publication, performance, and display. Infringement includes the reproduction or distribution of a copyrighted work in the following ways:

Downloading, Duplication and Distribution of copyrighted material

Users engaged in the duplication and distribution of copyrighted material are subject to fines.

Penalties include imprisonment of up to ten years and fines of up to $250,000 in fines. A person who lawfully acquires an authorized copy of a document, digital content or training materials, etc. would be an infringer if they used or engaged in the duplication, posting or unauthorized paid or non-paid commercial delivery to others (e.g. a client company duplicating training materials and delivering unauthorized content to its employees or staff, unauthorized duplication of content for delivery by an unauthorized agent, etc.).

Copyright infringement can also result in civil and criminal penalties. Anyone found liable for civil copyright infringement can be ordered to pay damages, with fines ranging from $750 to $30,000 per work infringed. For "willful" infringement, a court may award up to $150,000 per work infringed.
